The main goal of the project is to increase social inclusivity and opportunities for residents of all ages and different origins through the main lines:

- The transformation of the “Wild Program” building blocks, from improvement of the blocks to radical rearrangement of the blocks, the relocation of the houses in the judicial neighborhoods and new leisure and cultural programs in Uddevalla and Skridskog.
- The exploration of the area in the south through the reduction of the existing blocks of buildings and the transformation of the Dalaberg water tower into a center for new production and leisure activities in the south and its integration with the transportation network.
- The northern part of Uddevalla and the existing forests will be preserved as wild landscape.

Improved paths and roads
Residential densification

The foreseen interventions in Bulid, Dalaberg and Hovhult are planned into different phases, in order to limit the financial burden and to prepare the transformation strategy. The project includes interventions that will improve not only the urban landscape, but also the natural environment from different sides, from residential areas to local services and administration.
